ITALY'S CHOICE.

Italy's entrance into the European struggle is inevitable. Her best course to this time was not due to a desire to remain at peace, which she realized was impossible, but to determine with which side she had better cast her lot. Her choice serves her inclination as well as her interest.

Italy has been a member of the Triple Alliance for thirty-three years, and she breaks the bonds of that union cheerfully. She has no other alliance from herself, either than preference. France was feared as a political and commercial rival, but the enmity between Austria and Italy is traditional. The latter's given grievance is the retention by Austria of certain provinces whose population are still of Italian nationality. With the formation of the Triple Entente composed of France, Russia and England, and the alliance of Germany and Austria-Hungary, it was understood for Italy to remain neutral, as it would be dangerous for her to be left alone when the present war is ended. If the Teutons win she will probably be no worse off than she would be if she remained neutral, while with her lot cast on the side of the Allies she has reason to expect what she desires in event the fortune of war goes against Germany and Austria.

Nevertheless, her decision was not reached without some painful perplexities and serious divisions of sentiment. Rome has seen the highest diplomatic development and the greatest diplomatic activity during the past nine months. Germany sought at any cost to prevent Italy from joining the Allies, but the cost was to be at Austrian expense, and Francis Joseph grumbled, and then openly resented. His attitude determined Italy's action. Not even with concession Austria might have been thereafter. They would have been regarded as being temporary only.

The formal declaration of war finds both nations well prepared, and the war news may be expected to contain something of naval encounters on the Adriatic where both nations have battleships. The 1,000,000 troops which Italy will send to the Austrian border will necessarily weaken the forces of the Central powers, but will not necessarily follow. Peace is not yet in sight, and the issue is doubtful both as to its conclusion and its duration. We can only hope that the end will come before the legacy of bitterness and burden to coming generations has become overwhelming and unbearable.

WAR AND THE STEEL TRADE.

That war between this country and Germany would upset all present calculations bearing upon the steel industry seems to be the opinion of many in the steel trade. The following view is taken by a representative of a large steel company:

"In the event of this country becoming involved in the European struggle consumers would be inclined to make few commitments for future delivery. A large amount of construction work now under way or contemplated would be stopped. The railroads would be inclined to spend very little money for construction. They are spending very little money as it is. In the first place, it would be difficult for them to get money. This would be inclined to finance large losses of construction securities for extensions, etc. Financing would be confined largely to war loans. However, there would be more shipbuilding and many steel plants would be called upon to supply guns, shrapnel, etc., but demand for steel for war purposes would be offset many times over by the falling off in demand for commercial steel."

Many leaders of commerce and industry are now expressing as a result of the extraordinary call for steel in the country for grain, munitions, woods, leather, copper, etc. They are prospering at the expense of the general European conflict. At the same time a large percentage of the industries of the country are getting a fair amount of commercial business. Prospects of war have caused consumers to hesitate. If the German reply to the President's note is satisfactory, we expect the steel industry will continue its progress."

"Every Frick plant in the district has been ordered on a six-day turn this week," says the cheerful Connellsville News. Not quite, little one. The active ovens of the Frick coke company are being operated six days per week, but these include only 12,025 tons out of a total of 19,224. Better times are gradually coming to the Connellsville coke region, but those who desire to just how fast and how far they come must read The Courier.

The Sunday sermons ran to war, but dwelt upon the blessings of peace. Under the circumstances we are better appreciated than ever before.

Pennsylvania crop prospects are reported good. There has certainly been no lack of growing weather.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has found the railroads guilty of carrying freight on cheaply on their Lake boat lines, and has ordered that the boats be sold. Some people are wondering why the commission didn't order the boat rates to be advanced instead of demanding that the boats be put out of business to the possible inconvenience of much traffic.

The price of Connellsville coal remains unimpaired chiefly because the quality is incomparable and the quantity limited.

Under the Dome

Special to The Courier, May 25.—The pneumonia and tuberculosis policy of an administration that saves at the spigot and wastes at the hung-hole was illustrated again last week when the Treasury Department made an order placing 1,000 janitors, choristers and similar employees on an eight-day furlough in order to save a small portion of their already meager pittance. Thus the Democratic pledge of economy has the beginning of its fulfillment. After appropriating $100,000,000 for the payment of debts, and making a large number of cutbacks, and angling the appearance of many millions for a dangerous ship-purchase scheme and finding positions for some and some-in-law of members of the Cabinet, the first step in economy is undertaken by cutting the compensation of the hardest worked and poorest paid of all the hundreds of thousands of government employees.

The order which has been issued applies to every federal public employee in the United States for the sum of $12,650,000 is appropriated. The burden of the saying that the administration proposes to effect falls upon those who perform the service of sweeping, scrubbing, cleaning, suspending, etc.

The order which has been issued applies to every federal public employee in the United States for the sum of $12,650,000 is appropriated. The burden of the saying that the administration proposes to effect falls upon those who perform the service of sweeping, scrubbing, cleaning, suspending, etc.

The administration has aroused a storm of criticism against the administration. The policy is particularly condemned because the administration has been extravagant in many other respects where economy could have been practiced without detriment to the public service and without injury to individuals. For instance, in the various instances where the law administration has employed special counsel to conduct litigation in various parts of the United States, the present administration, without any charge of inefficiency, dismissed the attorneys who were conducting the cases and employed other attorneys who would necessarily have to study the facts and familiarize themselves with the law, such attorney being employed, as is indicated, at higher salaries than the experienced men were receiving and without any apparent reason for the change, other than that the newly employed ones were "deserving Democrats."

Other men have been appointed to high-subdued positions in the government service with no apparent special qualifications other than their relationship to the members of the treasury, the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of the Navy. Instead of investing economy by saving the money paid to these officials, the administration chose to make its first move for the fulfillment of its economy pledge by taking tribute from the poorest paid public servants, who are frequently men and women of advanced age and dire need of all the compensation they receive.

This set of the Treasury Department has served a valuable end, however, by calling public attention once more to the violation of the economy pledge. This subject received wide discussion at the opening of the last session of Congress when the Democratic chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations condemned his own party for its excessive spending, showed that the excess of expenditure chiefly to the executive departments which had urged appropriations $112,000,000 in excess of the amount Congress appropriated.

Several Indictments of Democratic administration came, unfortunately of course, from Democrats themselves, including the Southern Commercial Assistant Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo said that "no property has already been restored." It this means anything at all, it means that prosperity had been destroyed. Otherwise it could not be "restored." Democrats condemned Republicans a year ago for saying that American industry had been injured by Democratic legislation, yet they assert exactly the same thing in other words when they say that recovery has been delayed. "We do not believe in misleading by saying that recovery has been in spite of the European War; whereas the demonstrated fact is that revival of business is due to the war and in spite of Democratic policies.

Administration officials were stunned a few days ago when 2,500 residents of Washington stood in line to receive their first ration coupons as unskilled laborers in the government service. There were a few hundred applicants, but 2,500 applicants was a severe shock to those who have been contending that prosperity has returned and the army of the unemployed disbanded.

The catfish is so named because he looks about as much like a fish as he does like a cat.

He is one of the commonest citizens in American waters. If he championed the cause of the Allies he would be more unpopular than a crocodile. He consists of a vast, comprehensive mouth with a specially constructed head, with a mouth so wide that there isn't enough left of him to make a very impressive body. He is therefore mostly head. However, it is a flat head with a slanting broad. The catfish is not intelligent, but can be caught with a common hook and any old bait as easily as a confidence man can be hooked by a smooth oil well promoted.

The catfish is liberally decorated with spots and wears two horns over his fin which look like the whiskers of a Chinese mandarin. He is more remarkable for the size of his spine than for his intelligence. He can be caught with a common hook and any old bait as easily as a confidence man can be hooked by a smooth oil well promoted.

The catfish lives in a burble and orderly manner in the muddy bottom of any old stream and is the bane of the river boy and the Mississippi river fisherman. Some catfish are content to weigh half a pound while some of them grow to 200 pounds.

The catfish is a bottom feeder.

SCOTTDALE MAN GETS TEACHING ON PEACH TREES

Advice as to Ringing a Tree Valuable to Many Growers.

HOW TO GET RID OF BORERS

Hundreds of People in This Section are Interested in Instructions of Care of Trees at This Season; Advice Against Auseine of Lead.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTTDALE, May 24.—A photograph of a "ringed" peach tree sent by H. J. Springer, a photographer of this place, and a partner with John D. Shiley in the big peach orchard near Pennaville has been the subject of a complimentary letter by H. A. Surface of Harrisburg, the economic zoologist of the Department of Agriculture, who gives some valuable information for peach growers.

Professor Surface writes: "I thank you sincerely for your very excellent photographs. I shall be pleased to keep them at the office and will forward duplicates to Mr. Kerr. The one showing the branch in heavy bloom, which was ringed by Mr. Kerr during the previous spring, is a great object lesson, and shows many things of value. I shall probably publish this illustration in my bulletin next month when I ringed the limb. I gave my demonstrators special instruction on this point, and am glad to know that Mr. Kerr carried the lesson to you and your neighbors. I would recommend that about the first of August your neighbor ring the other branches of the tree, ordinarily I think it is too early to do it much sooner."

The ringing of the limb was in the case of a neighbor of Mr. Springer, who had a healthy peach tree that failed to blossom, although several years old. Mr. Kerr, the demonstrator, said that it had all gone to wood. Taking his knife he cut a ring, perhaps a quarter of an inch wide, around the limb down near the tree trunk. He cut the ring carefully through the bark, leaving the thin membranous tissue of sap. The result was that this spring that particular limb came out with a heavy load of blossoms, while all the rest of the tree was only leaves.

Continuing Professor Surface gives several other valuable pieces of instructions to fruit growers. He says: "The pictures of your orchard are good and show the trees to be thrifty. I recommend that you go over them again for borers, and wherever you find any brown specks in the gum or wax remove the borer with a knife. There is nothing you can apply to kill them except arsenic, which you can apply in another washing with lime sulphur solution about the middle of July or the last of July; give them another washing with lime sulphur solution letting some of it over the earth itself, that is around the trees, and about the middle of September give them another light washing, washing only the trunk and leaving the earth mound and in place, apply lime with a strong poultice applied to the trunk of the tree and the surface of the earth near it. Do not use arsenic or borax at this time. You did well in advertising arsenic, lead, etc., but do not let any of it come in contact with the trees, fear it may injure them, in many cases it has not done so, but in a few cases there is evidence that it has."

"I know that the treatment herein outlined will prevent further injury by the peach borers. I can name a few persons who have treated their trees in this way. It is a method which I first devised and proposed, and I shall be glad to learn of the results of your treatment of the same. Keep your trees mounded during the fall and winter, and you will have no borers to dig out with a knife next spring."

BIRTHDAY SOCIAL

A birthday social will be held at the home of Rev. J. Alex. Agnew, pastor of the Christian Church, corner High street and Walnut avenue, Scottdale, on Thursday evening, May 27, at 7:30. A musical program will be carried out, and lunch will be served by the ladies of the church. A good time is assured all.

Children's Day will be observed at Christian Church the first Sunday evening in June. Title of the program, "Cherry Blossom Land."

HARRISBURG WOMAN FINDS QUICK RELIEF

Mary Wheeler Gains in Weight After Taking Wonderful Remedy.

Mary Wheeler of 706 Green street, Harrisburg, Pa., for a long time was a victim of stomach disorders. She tried many treatments and found nothing that could help her.

At last she came upon Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and quickly found herself on the way to health. She wrote: "I received your wonderful stomach remedy. I took it and it acted just as you said it would. I had suffered with my stomach for nearly a year and doctor'd all that time. The first dose of your treatment gave me relief. I feel like now. I had awful distress after eating and suffered from bloating and gas, but now I feel fine, am gaining in weight and eat eat anything."

ITCHING NEARLY DROVE A WHOLE FAMILY CRAZY

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 24, 1914.—"My husband had a rash all over his body, and soon the WHOLE FAMILY was in the same condition. It looked scaly and raised up on the arms and back in big blisters. This trouble burned and itched so that it would nearly drive one crazy. It was always worse at night, so we could not sleep. We all had this trouble for about two or three years, and during that time tried many remedies and prescriptions with no results. We tried Realno Ointment and Realno Soap, and it relieved us a great deal, but before the third jar of ointment had been used, we were all completely cured. It was four months since we were cured, and there are no traces of the trouble." (Signed) Mrs. S. A. Charlton, 1320 Lawn Ave.

Every druggist sells Realno Ointment and Realno Soap, and physicians have prescribed them for 20 years in the treatment of skin troubles.

USING SOAP
SPOILS THE HAIR

A great show was the universal verdict of the large crowds that attended the initial performance of the Jackson & Andrews Musical Comedy Company at the above theatre yesterday. Never has a tableau been so well received and appreciated as was this company in offering the fascinating show, which, it is to be hoped, will help to win the admiration of its audience.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary unsifted coconut oil

(which is pure and greaseless), is cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonsful will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which will easily remove any particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get unsifted coconut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

"Ah!" he said, twirling his mustache thoughtfully. "That's just the question. She may be the victim of that blackguard Woodroffe, who is one of the most expert swindlers in London, and who has already done two terms of penal servitude."

"But he is an extremely friendly terms with Elma. It was he who succeeded in finding her in Finland, and taking her beyond Oberg's sphere of influence to Petersburgh."

"Then it is certainly only an affected friendship, with some sinister motive underlying it."

"She wrote a letter from her island prison to an old schoolfellow named Lydia Morston, asking her to see Woodroffe at his rooms in Cork street, and tell him that through all else was suffering she had kept her promise to him, and that the secret was still safe."

"Exactly. And now the fellow fears that as you are so actively searching out the truth, she may yield to your demands and explain. He therefore intends to silence her."

"What to kill her, you mean?" I gasped, in quick apprehension.

"Well, he might do so, in order to save himself, you see," Jack replied.

I tried to get from him all that he knew concerning Elma, but he seemed, for some reason, disinclined to tell.

All I could gather was that Leithcourt was in league with Oberg and Woodroffe, and that Muriel had acted as an entirely innocent agent.

"We must find Muriel," he declared, when I pressed him to tell me everything he knew. "There are facts you have told me which negative my own theories, and only from her can we obtain the real truth."

"But surely you know where she is?" She writes to you," I said.

"The last letter, which I received at Gib, ten days ago, was from the Hotel Bristol at Notting Hill, in the Tyrol, yet Bartlett says she has been seen down at Eastbourne."

"But you have an address where you always write to her, I suppose?"

"Yes, a secret one. I have written and made no appointment, but she has not kept it. She has been prevented, of course. She may be with her parents, and unable to come to London."

"You did not know that they had fled, and were in hiding?"

"Of course not. What I've heard tonight is new to me—amazing news."

"And does it not convey to you the truth?"

"It does—a ghastly truth concerning Elma Heath," he answered in a low voice, as though speaking to himself.

"Tell me. What? I'm dying, Jack, to know everything concerning her. Who is that fellow Oberg?"

"Her enemy. She, by mere accident learned his secret and Woodroffe's, and they now both live in deadly fear of her."

"But Chater?"

"I know very little concerning him. He may have conspired with them, or he may be innocent. It seems as though he were antagonistic to their schemes, if Leithcourt and his family really fled from him."

"And yet he was on board the Lola. Indeed, he may have helped to commit the burglary at the consulate?" I said.

"Quite likely," he answered. "But our first object must be to rediscover Muriel. Would it not be best to send an urgent wire to the address where I always write? She would then reply here, no doubt. I've told you practically everything, my dear old fellow. The facts of the affair can be made known only by Muriel. I tell you, we must find her."

"Yes, we must—at all hazards," I said. "Let's go across to the telegraph office opposite Charing Cross. It's open always." And we rose and walked out along the Strand, now nearly deserted, and dispatched an urgent message to Muriel at an address in Hurlingham road, Fulham.

Afterwards we stood outside on the curb, still talking. I leant to part from him, when there passed by in the shadow two men in dark overcoats, who crossed the road behind us—the front of Charing Cross station, and then continued on towards Trafalgar square.

As the light of the street lamp fell upon them I thought I recognized the face of one as that of a person I had seen before, yet I was not at all certain, and my mind to remember whom the passerby resembled prevented me from saying anything further to Jack than:

"A fellow I know has just gone by. I think."

"We seem to be meeting hosts of friends tonight," he laughed. "After all, old chaps. It does one good to come back to our dear, dirty old town again. We abuse it when we are here, and talk of the life in Paris and Vienna and Brussels, but when we are away there is no place on earth so dear to us, for it is home." But there!" he laughed. "I'm actually growing romantic. Ah! if we could only find Muriel! But we must tomorrow. Ta-ta! I shall go around to the club and sleep, for I haven't fixed on any diligences yet. Come in at ten tomorrow, and we will decide upon some plan. One thing is plainly certain—Elma must at once be got out of Russia. She's certainly in deadly peril of her life there."

"Yes," I said. "And you will help me?"

"With all my heart, old fellow," answered my friend, warmly grasping my hand, and then we parted, he strolling along towards the National Gallery on his way back to the "Junior," while I returned to the Cellar.

"Captain Durnford?" I inquired of the hall porter of the club next morning.

"Not hero, sir."

"But he slept hero last night," I remarked. "I have an appointment with him."

The man consulted the big book before him, and answered:

"Captain Durnford went out at 9:27 last night, sir, but has not returned."

"Strange, I thought, but although I waited in the club nearly an hour, he did not put in an appearance."

About four o'clock, as I was passing through the big hall of the hotel, I heard a voice behind me utter a greeting in Italian, and, turning in surprise, found Ollito, dressed in his best suit of black, standing hat in hand.

In an instant I recollect what Jack had told me, and regarded him with some suspicion.

"Signor Commandatore," he said in a low voice, as though fearing to be overheard, "may I be permitted to speak in private with you?"

"Certainly," I said, and I took him in a lift up to my room.

"I have come to warn you, signore," he said, when I had given him a seat. "Your enemies mean harm to you."

"Look here, Ollito!" I exclaimed determinedly. "Tell me the truth regarding this assassination of your poor wife up in Scotland."

"Ah, signore!" he answered sadly in a changed voice. "I do not know. It was a plot. Someone represented me—but he was killed also. They believed they had struck me down," he added, with a bitter laugh.

"Poor Arilda's body was found concealed behind a rock on the opposite side of the wood. I saw it—ah!" he cried shuddering.

The police had, it seemed, succeeded in discovering the unfortunate woman after all, and had found that she was his wife.

"You know a man named Leithcourt?" I asked a few minutes later.

"Now tell the truth. In this affair, Ollito, our interests are mutual, are they not?"

He nodded, after a moment's hesitation.

"And you know also a man named Archer—who is sometimes known as Hornby, or Woodroffe—as well as a friend of his called Chater."

"Si, signore," he said. "I have met them all—to my regret."

"And have you ever met a Russian—a certain Baron Oberg—and his niece, Elma Heath?"

"His niece? She isn't his niece."

"Then who is she?" I demanded.

"How do I know? I have seen her once or twice. But she's dead, isn't she? She knew the secret of those men, and they intended to kill her. I tried to prevent them taking her away on the yacht, and I would have gone to the police—only I dare not because my own hands were not quite clean. I know they intended to silence her, but I was powerless to save her, poor young lady. They took her on board Leithcourt's yacht, the Iris, and they sailed for the Mediterranean, I believe."

"And what was your connection with them?"

"Well, I was Leithcourt's servant," was his reply. "I was steward on the Iris for a year, until I suppose they thought that I began to sue too much, and then I was placed in a position ashore."

"And what did you see?"

"More than I care to tell, signore. If they were arrested I should be arrested, too, you see."

"But I mean to solve the mystery, Ollito," I said fiercely, for I was in no trifling mood. "I'll fathom it. If it costs me my life."

"If the signor solves it, then I cannot be charged with revealing the truth," was the man's diplomatic reply.

"But I fear they are far too wary."

"And his fears he is sinking."

"He has uttered no words?" I asked anxiously.

"None. He has never regained consciousness, and I fear sir, he never will."

"It is a case of deliberate murder," the doctor was here a quarter of an hour ago," whispered the sister.

FAY KAISER AND HARRY GREB MEET HERE ON MAY 31

Middleweights to Clash in Windup of a Classy Boxing Show.

FAST PRELIMINARIES, TOO

Ted Butterman to Clash With Jake Morris of Smithfield; lightweight Champion of the Navy; and Terrell Duncan Will Meet Fighting Morris.

Promoter Jack Stevens is back in Connellsville boasting a great boxing show for the Connellsville Athletic Club on Memorial Day. Tickets were given a short time ago by the exhibition fighters from Birmingham and Toledo. Winter fought the best six round so far seen here, so there will likely be a record breaking house to see the popular Fay Kaiser meet Harry Greb, the Pittsburgh sensation.

Kaiser decisively defeated Al Grayson at Frostburg last Tuesday night, but he has his work lined up for him in Greb, who has proven a real sensation.

In the semi-final Ted Butterman of Connellsville will take on Jake Morris of Smithfield, the lightweight champion of the Navy during his service under Uncle Sam.

Terrell Duncan of Uniontown, who is a shifty colored boy, will take on Fighting Porkchop Harris of Mount Pleasant. Duncan has been cleaning up everybody he has met recently, but Harris expects to put a stop to his streak.

Another tick looks like a fine show. The participants can be depended upon to provide action all of the time and that is what the fans want.
